YARDE GIRL CAME BACK AND LANDED IN COUNTY JAIL

Paroled Convict's "Wife" Disregards Warning of Lee County Officials

CONFESSED TO THEFT

Stole $35 From a Dresser Drawer at Home Where She Secured Room

State's Attorney Harry Edwards spent all of Tuesday afternoon at the Dixon state colony assisting in the investigation of the slugging of J. D. Schmiddy by Prince Rollins. Mr. Edwards declared this morning that the investigation would be on for several days, at least, and that a new system would be put into effect. "There will be a stiffening up of the system and in time I believe matters there will be in fairly good condition."

Miss Bertha Yarde, the 19-year-old Tampico girl, who was ordered out of town Saturday when it was learned by the authorities that she had been living with Arthur Previer, a paroled convict employed at the state colony here, and posing as his wife, returned to Dixon Monday night, in spite of the officials' warnings that she had better stay away from this city, and she is now in the county jail awaiting action by the January grand jury on a charge of theft of $35 from the Harry Himes' home, 406 Hennepin ave., to which charge she confessed before Chief of Police Van Bibber and a number of witnesses.

The police had no intimation that she had returned to this city until yesterday afternoon they received a call from the Himes' residence, telling of the theft of $35 from a dresser drawer. When they were investigating the loss of the money they learned that the Yarde girl had returned to Dixon on the 10 o'clock interurban car Monday night, coming from Galesburg, where she went from Dixon Saturday via Denrock and Sterling. After arriving here she secured a room at the Himes home.

Was Sent For? When questioned she admitted she had taken the money, intending to purchase a fur neckpiece with it, providing her relatives failed to send her any money. She told the authorities she had been sent for by the head of the state colony, claiming to have received telegrams from that officer, in which it was stated no further action would be taken against her.

Following her confession to the theft she was arraigned before Justice Hanneken, who held her to the grand jury under $500 bonds when she waived preliminary hearing. Attorney John E. Erwin was appointed to defend her.

Her brother, Frank, arrived in Dixon from Tampico during the morning and will probably furnish bonds for her release from the county bastille.

Previer to Prison. Previer, the convict with whom she had, it is said, been living intimately, was taken back to the Joliet penitentiary this morning by Officer Bert Carter, for violation of his parole.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Paris, Nov. 27.—Rumania-Transylvania has proclaimed its independence and has sent an ultimatum to the Hungarian government asking that all political, administrative and judicial departments in territory inhabited by Rumanians in Hungary and Transylvania be handed over. Hungary has refused and the national Rumanian government has broken off negotiations, declining all responsibility for the consequences, the blame for which, it says, will be placed on the national Hungarian Council, according to the Matin.

BERNARD M. BARUCH MAY BE SECRETARY

PRESIDENT IS SAID TO HAVE OFFERED HIM PORTFOLIO IN HIS CABINET.

By Associated Press Leased Wire
Washington, Nov. 27.—Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, it was understood today, has been offered the position of Secretary of the Treasury, to succeed W. D. McAdoo. Whether he will be nominated is an open question. Mr. Baruch has urged upon the President his belief that he should not enter the cabinet on the grounds that his wealth, which is largely in government and other securities, might prove embarrassing.

For Director General of Railroads to succeed Mr. McAdoo, Charles A. Prouty, now Director of the railway administration's division of Public Service and Accounts, is believed to be one of the men under consideration. The President is expected to make a selection for both the treasury and the railway administration before he sails for Europe next week.

VIRTUE ITS OWN REWARD

CHAPTER CV.

It was only about nine o'clock when Ruth retired. She awoke as the clock struck twelve. She recalled that Brian said he would be home early. She raised herself on her elbow to see if he were in his bed.

It was a clear moonlight night. She could plainly see that the bed was unoccupied. At once she was wide awake. What had been the use of staying in because he had said he would come home early? Then the humorous side of the thought struck her. She smiled in the darkness. What difference really had it made? She had been sound asleep.

She lay awake listening for another hour before she heard his key in the door. That virtue was its own reward she was sure when he said he had spent a most enjoyable evening.

"Did you go to the theater?" he asked as he kicked off his shoes. "No, unfortunately Mr. Mandel was out of town so he couldn't act as my escort, as you so kindly suggested," Ruth used her most sarcastic tone.

"It was too bad," his careless voice made her wince. Then he threw back his head and laughed—a clear, ringing, boyish laugh. "Taking a leaf out of my note book, are you? I was pretty horrid, I know, this morning, and last night both. But—oh, never mind."

"How did your dinner come off?" "Fine." He put his hand in his pocket and fished out a little silver. "All that's left of your eighteen dollars. That tells the story."

Ruth gasped. A stab of something like real pain shot thru her as she remembered that she had earned that eighteen dollars, and had not even been consulted as to whether she would have preferred to entertain these friends of his at home; or pay for their entertainment elsewhere.

"You see, we had some wine, and then cigars after the coffee. Then we talked so long we had liquors, and some more smokes. Then I had to give the waiter a good tip because he had held down the table so long." There was no apology in Brian's voice. He simply had stated facts.

"It would have been cheaper to have entertained them here, and surely Rachel can cook well enough for anyone."

"A darn sight better than those restaurant cooks. But—well you always get up-stage and hurt when I say anything about your working. So I won't say what's in my mind."

"If I didn't work we couldn't have Rachel," Ruth said very quietly. She knew what was in his mind; had heard him talk too often on the subject to be in any doubt. She did not feel in the mood to argue with him.

"Oh, I know she is one of the luxuries you would rather have than to have your husband's society."

"How can you talk so?" "Because it is true. Don't you work in the shop so that you won't be obliged to work at home? And doesn't your work take you away from me, and doesn't it give you money to pay Rachel, and isn't that a sign that you prefer her to my company? If it isn't, I'll eat my hat."

He had said all this not crossly, as was his wont, but more in a tone of raillery. Evidently he had enjoyed himself far more than usual.

"Who were your guests, Brian?" She felt like adding that she thought she was entitled to know, as long as she had paid for their entertainment. "Two Englishmen."

"Was it business?" "Yes and no. That is, they knew a lot of things I want to learn about, and so I invited them to dinner. Nothing fine chaps, both of them."

"Are they in New York for long?" "Not very long, a couple of weeks." "Why not ask them up and let me meet them?"

"Not on your life. They would know that I couldn't afford all this, and Rachel, too. No indeed! Until I earn enough to support the style in which you have made up your mind to live, I shall not make any more acquaintances that I bring home." It was the first time that Brian had said such a thing, in spite of his objections to Ruth's working. He had been cross and fault-finding because Ruth had to be away occasionally; had acted a bit shame-faced, at first, to have her pay the bills and give him money. But to say that he would not bring people to their home because he didn't support it, was terrible. He took Ruth's money to entertain them elsewhere. Ruth made up her mind it was just an excuse to stay out without her.

words and the first gentleman called was Col. W. B. Brinton. Mr. Brinton declared that he had not looked very deeply into conditions and also that he really did not know who the present owners of the water system were. He believed, however, that the owners were inclined to do what was right in the matter and that some way could be agreed upon for

Brinton said that it was his opinion

PHIDIAN ART CLUB—

A delightful meeting of the Phidian Art club was held at the home of Mrs. F. X. Newcomer yesterday. Miss Henrietta Florscheutz who has a beautiful voice, sang a double number (a.) Soft Winds Blow, and (b.) Love Like the Dawn Came Stealing. Mrs. Goodsell accompanied Miss Florscheutz at the piano. The paper of the afternoon was a very interesting description of Paraguay and its people given by Mrs. George Steel.

Paraguay, a republic, has had a turbulent history, due somewhat to its isolated condition in an inland mountainous region. Until recently it was a hermit among nations, but now that railroads have been built, the country is being developed and Paraguay is awakening. It has many beautiful buildings, the climate is delightful, fruit and vegetables are plentiful as agriculture is, with the excellent soil and good weather conditions, an occupation that brings large returns with little effort on the part of the farmers. Asuncion is the chief as well as the capital city. German influence is strong, as the army is patterned after that of Germany and Prussian officers have charge of the instruction in military tactics. Another proof of far-reaching German intrigue. It is a delightful place for tourists who delight in the picturesque inhabitants in their gay costumes. The people are largely ignorant and yet have the most charming manners. The Church of Rome is the principal church.

The paper was followed by two piano numbers by Miss Dorothy Raymond, who gave a Nocturne and a Military Polonaise, both by Chopin, in a most brilliant manner. The gaiety of the victorious French soldiers returning, was ably expressed by Miss Dorothy.

The club had a communication, asking that the members use their influence against the purchase of German-made toys. At a recent showing in Chicago, there were enough beautiful American-made toys to delight the most exacting of American children.

A New Kind of Thanksgiving

YOU'VE never seen just such a Thanksgiving Day as you'll have this year; you've never had so much to be thankful for, no matter what you've gained or lost in the past months.

This time Thanksgiving ought to be more than an expression of our personal gratification; it ought not to have any cloud of our personal loss.

Let us give thanks that the world is being made safe for Liberty, for freedom of conscience, for political restoration of the peoples of Europe.

The greatest era has dawned; the greatest events of history are now moving.

We can be thankful that we have enough to eat; a good many people whose hunger is as real as ours, haven't enough.

Let us be thankful, too, for the brave men and women who have given all they have to winning the triumph of Liberty those who may return to us; those who have laid their lives down.

Let us consecrate ourselves to the great cause of international brotherhood.

"Grace, the night I was imprisoned by Hartmann in his rooms, and came so near to dying by gas, I noticed something about the man that struck me very forcibly, and I have not forgotten it."

"What?"

"He has a peculiar jagged scar on his left forearm. I noticed it that night when he was trying my wrists. In our struggle his sleeve and cuff were pushed nearly to his elbow. If this man who claims to be Vernon has that scar, I intend to demand his arrest at once."

"It ought to be very easy to tell," said Grace. "Meanwhile, what am I to do about a disguise? You know I came on board with absolutely no baggage."

"See the head stewardess. She will be able to set you what you need. These things often happen when people's baggage goes astray. And try to get a pair of spectacles, and do your hair up differently, like a school teacher or something of the sort. The woman never got a real good look at you that night. I doubt if she would recognize you even as you are; with a few changes you will be quite safe."

"And just what do you expect her to do?"

"I expect her to make an attempt to communicate with Hartmann, provided he is on board. If my suspicions are correct, it is this fellow who is trying to represent himself at Vernon that she will try to communicate with. You watch her. I'll watch him. Between us we'll make sure."

"And her reason for communicating with him?"

"Will be, of course, to tell him that she has regained possession of Mlle. Mercier's one-franc piece."

"I see." She came up to him and kissed him. "Don't run any risks, Richard. You know how much you mean to me." In a moment she was gone.

Duvall returned to the deck, keeping a sharp lookout for Vernon; but the latter was nowhere to be seen. He met the first officer and asked after him, but M. Beauregard volunteered but little information. "He is lying down, I believe," he said. "Naturally he is much fatigued after his frightful experience." The first officer seemed to rather resent the detective's questions. No doubt Captain Bonnot had acquainted him with the latter's suspicions.

Duvall determined upon a bold move. He ascertained from the acting purser, who had replaced Vernon at New York, that the latter was for the time being sharing the stateroom of the first officer. He went to the room at once and knocked.

The man within was busy changing his things. He came to the door, clad only in his underclothes, opened it cautiously and looked out. When he saw the detective he started momentarily and frowned. "I regret that I cannot ask you to enter at present," he said; "as you see, I am dressing."

Duvall's eyes were fixed upon the jagged scar which disfigured the other man's left arm near the elbow. "I beg your pardon, monsieur," he said. "I merely wished to ask you a few questions about this man Hartmann. I will call at some more convenient time." He bowed and hastily withdrew.

He immediately sought an interview with Captain Bonnot, whom he found to be on the bridge. The latter joined him a trifle impatiently. "What is it now?" he asked.

"I have discovered, Captain Bonnot, beyond any possible doubt, that this fellow who is trying to pass himself off as George Vernon is none other than Haussman or Hartmann. I have positive proofs, and I demand the fellow's arrest at once."

"What are your proofs, monsieur?" asked the captain, a trifle coldly. From the expression of his face it was clear that he was wondering whether the celebrated M. Lefevre was not suffering from temporary mental aberration.

"Hartmann tried to kill me last night in New York. I observed a scar upon his arm. This fellow who calls himself Vernon has a similar scar."

"Is that all?"

"Surely it is enough!" exclaimed Duvall, who was rapidly beginning to lose his temper.

"My dear Lefevre," said the captain, eying his companion pitifully, "you say this man is an impostor and ask me to place him under arrest because he has a scar upon his arm. Many people have scars. I cannot arrest him on such evidence as that. Besides, I tell you I know the man. Were you to come to me and say that my own brother was an impostor I could as readily believe you."

"But, monsieur, I tell you I am equally sure—"

"The captain interrupted him. "Monsieur, Vernon has been in the employ of this line for several years. He has been with me, on this boat, for over a month. Is it likely that I should not know him when I see him? The story of his imprisonment on board is clear, concise, convincing. Why should I refuse to believe it. I know of no charge against him that would in the least warrant my ordering his arrest. You will have to get better evidence, monsieur, than any you have yet offered before I can do that."

"Captain Bonnot," exclaimed Duvall, now thoroughly angry, "what you say is ridiculous!"

Bonnot swung around upon him, pale with rage. "Monsieur!" he said, "do not forget that while this vessel is on the high seas I am in sole command. I respect your efforts in behalf of the line, but I fear that you have temporarily taken leave of your senses. Were it not for that, I should feel more inclined to place you under arrest than M. Vernon. Please do not annoy Mr. Vernon or myself further in this matter. I repeat that I see no reason whatever for placing him under arrest, and until I do he shall remain at liberty. Good day!" He turned on his heel and returned to the bridge.

Duvall went back toward his stateroom in disgust. As he did so, the woman he had been watching all the morning came up to him. "Monsieur," she said, "may I speak with you for a moment?"

CHAPTER XVI. Checkedmate.

To say that Richard Duvall was surprised when the woman that he knew to be Hartmann's companion of the night before would be putting it mildly indeed.

As a matter of fact, he at once arrived at the conclusion that Hartmann had in some way communicated with her and advised her to be on her guard.

She addressed him as M. Lefevre. At her statement that she desired to speak to him Duvall merely bowed. "Suppose we go to my stateroom," she said, with a bright smile. The detective realized at once that she was not only a very clever woman, but a very attractive one as well.

"To your stateroom?" he questioned.

"Yes. We can talk much better there, and I have a number of things I feel like I should say to you."

"Very well. I am curious to hear what they are."

She led the way to the deck below, and presently threw open the door of her room. Duvall was quite familiar with it, having already searched it thoroughly, earlier in the day, in a fruitless attempt to recover the missing franc piece from the box of Havana cigars.

"Won't you sit down?" the woman said, closing the door carefully after her.

Duvall sat upon the sofa berth and looked at the woman curiously, waiting for her to speak. She did so at once.

"You are aboard the Richelieu, Mr. Lefevre," she said, because you are trying to find the man who is supposed to have murdered the purser, Mr. Vernon, and to have also stolen a certain package which was in the purser's possession."

"Indeed," Duvall replied, "you appear to be unusually well informed."

He smiled ironically.

"I am. Now that the purser has turned up, safe and sound, your task is over. I should say."

Duvall smiled. "Possibly," he said, wondering what the woman was trying to get at.

"Perhaps not entirely over," the woman added. "Of course, this fellow Hartmann must be found, as well as the missing package, but will you be so good as to tell me why you suspect me of having anything to do with the matter?"

"What makes you think that I suspect you?"

"How could I help doing so? You have watched me ever since I have been on board. You have even searched my room, although for what purpose I cannot imagine. Come, be frank with me, and I will be equally frank with you. What is it you want?"

Duvall did not at once reply. The woman's method of attack was to say the least disconcerting. He had no idea just how much she knew. He was quite certain, however, that Hartmann, in his new role of Vernon, had in some way sent her word to be on her guard against him. He suddenly decided to match her frankness with equal frankness of his own.

"I want the one-franc piece," he said shortly.

"And why do you think I know anything about it?" she parried.

"You found it, when you emptied the cigars from the box that was in that satchel." He pointed to Hartmann's satchel, which was jammed beneath the berth.

For a moment the woman was taken off her guard. She recovered herself quickly, however. "What an idea!" she laughed. "How could the coin you seek possibly be in a box of cigars, and in my satchel?"

"It is not your satchel, young woman. It belongs to a man now aboard this vessel—a man who is wanted for at least one murder, if not more. Do not attempt to deny it. I have only to open the satchel and display its contents to prove the truth of what I say."

The woman laughed, then took the bag from beneath the berth and emptied its contents upon the floor. "Here is your proof!" she exclaimed gaily. The articles she thus carelessly spread upon the carpet were all pieces of women's clothing. Those belonging to Hartmann, which Duvall had seen in the satchel earlier in the day, had mysteriously disappeared.

Although considerably astonished,

Duvall did his best to hide his chagrin. "No doubt you have given them to their proper owner," he said, "but they were there a few hours ago."

"My word is as good as yours in that respect, my friend. Come—is that all the evidence you have against me? Throw your cards on the table. If you win—Captain Bonnot shall have me placed under arrest at once—if I win, you will perhaps cease to annoy me with your suspicions."

"This is not all the evidence I have against you. There is much more. Last night, for instance, you shut a man named Dumas and a young woman in a room in One Hundred and Tenth Street and left them to die after turning on the gas. For that I am quite certain I shall hold you if for nothing else."

It was the woman's turn to be frightened, although she did her best to conceal the agitation that the detective's statement caused her. "I don't know what you mean," she muttered hastily. Evidently she thought Dumas dead hours ago and her part in his death unknown to any one.

"Oh, yes, you do. After that you and your companion attempted a burglary at the Hotel Rochambeau. For that, also, I can hold you."

The woman attempted to laugh. "You talk like a madman," she said. "I haven't the least idea what you mean."

"You asked for frankness. Why not give it?"

"Your statements are ridiculous. You could not prove them, in any event. If the man and woman of whom you speak were killed by gas, they doubtless committed suicide. In any event, there is no one in the world who could testify that I had anything to do with the matter, or with the burglary you speak of, either."

Duvall did not think it necessary to tell the woman that Mlle. Mercier and himself, as Dumas, were able to testify against her, to say nothing of Grace. So far as he could determine the latter's presence on board was unknown to the woman.

"And now," he asked, "just what was your purpose in asking me to come here? What is it you want to say to me? I have told you of the charges against you. I did not ask for your arrest before, because I hoped, through you, to locate your companion, Hartmann. Events, however, have saved me that trouble. I have already located him. I shall therefore apply at once to Captain Bonnot to have you placed under arrest. And in order that you may not, meanwhile, be able to dispose of the franc piece which I do not doubt you have concealed somewhere about you, I shall stay here and wait until Captain Bonnot has joined us." He raised his hand to press the electric bell.

"Wait," the woman leaned quickly forward. "Before you ring that bell I have something to say to you."

"What?"

"This. You are aboard this vessel under the name of M. Lefevre, prefect of police of Paris. I happen to know that you are nothing of the sort—that, in fact, you are an impostor. If you attempt to annoy me further I shall at once expose you to Captain Bonnot." She looked at him, her eyes flashing.

Duvall could not imagine in what way the woman had penetrated his disguise. He concluded that her statement was merely a bluff, and he met it promptly.

"What you say is ridiculous!" he exclaimed. "Captain Bonnot knows me well enough. He would laugh at such a statement."

LONDON SUGGESTS HUN WARSHIPS BE SUNK

SUGGESTION CREATES GREAT SURPRISE AMONG NAVAL OFFICIALS IN U. S.

By Associated Press Leased Wire

Washington, Nov. 26.—The suggestion from London that naval vessels surrendered by Germany under the armistice may be sunk to avoid possible disagreement among the associated nations as to their disposition, was received by naval officials here with surprise.

Secretary Daniels said the proposition had never been mentioned to him and he was certain American naval representatives had suggested no such plan.

No intimation has been given as to the policy of the United States in this regard. Admiral Benson, ranking officer among the American delegates, received full instructions before his departure, however.

If the Versailles conference decrees that the German warships are to be pro rated among the allies according to naval losses the United States would obtain only one destroyer and one armored cruiser, the major ships going to England, France and Italy.

AMUSEMENTS

GRAND OPERA OPENING IN CHICAGO GREAT SUCCESS

Following a brilliant opening performance unparalleled in the history of Chicago opera, the first week was notable for crowded and enthusiastic houses at all performances. The second week of the Chicago Grand Opera at the Auditorium promises to outstrip the opening week. Mestro Campanini will present two revivals unheard in Chicago for many years. Favorites of other seasons will be heard in new roles, and new favorites who distinguished themselves the first week will be brought forward in other operas.

On Monday night, Rosa Raisa, who received a rousing welcome here last Wednesday night after a summer season in South America, was again heard as Aida in the Verdi opera in which Chicago and New York have proclaimed her peerless. With her appeared the new tenor, Alessandro Dolci, who sprang into instant favor when he made his debut last week; Virgilio Iazzari, another newcomer of great promise; Cyrena van Gordon, and other singers familiar to opera-goers in Chicago.

Marguerita Sylva, who has not been heard in Chicago for several seasons, will sing the title role in "Carmen," when that opera is presented tonight. Miss Sylva has sung the role many times in Europe, and on one occasion when she appeared at Beziers, Louis Hasselmann, who will conduct the opera tonight, was the conductor. Lucien Muratore, considered the foremost French tenor in the world, will sing the role of Don Jose, and the cast will include Myrna Sharlow and Georges Baklanoff.

The revival of "William Tell" tomorrow night will introduce the much heralded new tenor, John O'Sullivan, and mark the second appearance of the beautiful French artist, Yvonne Gall. Others in the cast are Louise Bergt, Margory Maxwell, Octavo Dua, and August Bonille.

"Linda di Chamounix," which has not been sung in America for more than a quarter of a century, will be the bill on Thursday, Thanksgiving night, with Mme. Galli-Gurci and Riccardo Stracelli, a double-star alliance, in the leading roles, assisted by Caroffe Lazzari, Maria Chassens, Forrest Lamont, and others.

Rosa Raisa will make her first appearance as Tosca in Chicago Friday night in Puccini's opera "Tosca." As on Monday, her vis-a-vis will be Alessandro Dolci in the role of Mario, while Georges Baklanoff will be heard as Scarpia.

At Saturday's matinee, Madame Yvonne Gall will sing Juliet to the matchless Romeo of Lucien Muratore in "Romeo and Juliet." At this performance, Alfred Magnenat as Mercutio, will make his first appearance of the season. Others in the cast will include Louise Berat as the nurse and Marcel Journot as Friar Lawrence.

"Madame Butterfly" will be the opera at the popular priced performance Saturday night. This will be Mme. Tamaki Miura's first appearance at popular prices. The cast will include Forrest Lamont as Pinkerton, and others who appeared in the opera in the first week.

The young Chicago premiere danseuse, Sylvia Tell, who made her debut at the opening performance last Monday, will dance Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights, assisted by the caps de ballet. Giorgio Polacco will conduct the operas Monday and Friday; Louis Hasselmann, on Tuesday; Giuseppe Surani, Thursday and Saturday nights; and Marcel Charlier, on Wednesday and at Saturday's matinee.

County Judge John B. Crabtree is at Mt. Carroll today holding court.

NO. 165
AN ORDINANCE TO REGULATE THE USE OF GASOLINE, NAPHTHA, BENZOL AND OTHER LIGHT PETROLEUM AND COAL TAR PRODUCTS IN THE DRY CLEANING BUSINESS IN THE CITY OF DIXON, ILLINOIS.

BE IT ORDAINED BY THE COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF DIXON, ILLINOIS:

Section 1.—It shall be unlawful for any persons, firm or corporation to carry on the dry cleaning business in the City of Dixon, without complying with the regulations herein set forth.

These regulations are established and promulgated for the prevention of fires and loss of life and property.

Regulations

For the purpose of this ordinance, a dry cleaning business is defined to be the business of cleaning cloth, clothing, feathers, or any sort of fabrics by the use of gasoline, naphtha, benzene, benzol, or similar light petroleum, or coal tar products, or cleaning by process known as dry cleaning.

No such business shall be carried on except in a building separate and apart from other buildings; the doors of which shall be covered with metal and the window frames and sash of which shall be covered with metal. The floors of such building shall be of cement construction. No such business shall be carried on in a wooden or frame building, nor in a building used as a dwelling place.

The walls of such buildings shall have vent holes at the floor line, not less than twenty inches in area and not more than six feet apart, from center to center, properly protected by iron bars or other improved means of ventilation, or a proper ventilating exhaust fan system.

There shall be no connection from the said dry cleaning building to any public sewer.

It shall be unlawful to heat this building by any other than hot water or steam heat.

The lighting must be done by electricity in the most improved manner; the wires must be run in conduits; all lamps must be approved vapor proof lamps with keyless sockets and all switches must be 4 1/2 feet above floor of building and located near door so as not to allow opportunity for vapor to collect near it.

It shall be unlawful to locate, have, use, or maintain a steam generating boiler, dynamo, or motor within the walls of any dry cleaning building, except in a room entirely separated from the balance of the building.

Section 2.—No storage or dry cleaning building shall be placed, installed, constructed or maintained until an application for permission to do so, with plans and specifications showing full details of location, construction and connection have been filed with and approved by the Commissioner of Public Health and Safety.

Section 3.—All of the volatile liquids named herein shall be stored in underground tanks of the specifications as required herein.

All storage tanks shall be constructed of steel, coated on the outside with tar or other rust-resisting material. Tanks up to 170 gallons shall be constructed of not less than 14 gauge galvanized steel, and tanks from 170 gallons up to 560 gallons shall be constructed of not less than 12 gauge galvanized sheet steel; and tanks of 560 gallons and upwards shall be constructed of not less than 3-16 gauge galvanized sheet steel or of 1/4 inch black open hearth tank steel. Not more than six tanks of 280 gallons shall be allowed except by special permit of the chief of the fire department. All tanks to be installed underground not less than two feet below the surface, entirely surrounded by earth or earthen concrete. Should there be more than one tank, they shall be separated by at least 12 inches of earth all well tamped in place; the top of all tanks must be below the level of the lowest pipe line in the building used in connection with the equipment. There must be no openings or pipe connections except on the top of such tanks. They shall be properly vented and shall not be connected either directly or indirectly with any public or private sewer, drain, catch basin or pit in the City of Dixon.

Section 4.—All storage tanks shall be provided with a one-inch diameter, or larger galvanized iron vent pipe, same to be constructed to the top of the tank (connections of the tank to be fitted with a brass wire screen with at least 30 mesh).

This vent pipe must be carried up at least 4 feet above the roof of said building and terminated in a double goose-neck spark protector, openings of which must be covered with brass wire screen of at least 30 mesh.

Section 5.—No volatile substance in excess of two quarts shall be used for cleaning purposes, except in closed machines, and must be conveyed from the tanks to the machines in closed pipes, by means of the Rock suction pump or pumps properly controlled by valves, or pumps equally as good and approved by the National Board of Underwriters.

It shall be unlawful to store or settle any of said volatile substances in open vessels or tanks.

Each tank must be fitted with a galvanized iron fill pipe of at least 2 inch diameter, arranged to include in same a venting pipe for tank, or each tank may be fitted with a fill pipe and a filling vent pipe of not less than 1 1/4 inch size, in galvanized iron, and all such pipes must terminate in screw caps securely locked.

Where filler pipe runs to sidewalk or to an alley or other public highway, it must terminate in a screw cap securely locked, and be protected by a cast iron filler box, same to be flush with the sidewalk or alley, the cover of said filler box to be securely locked.

Section 6.—Dry room shall have an 8 inch vent, opening into the atmosphere for each four hundred and fifty feet of cubic space or fraction thereof; said vent pipe shall be carried up to a height of two feet above the roof and terminate in an approved ventilator hood. When dry rooms are located outside of said dry cleaning building, they shall have vent holes at the floor line not less than twenty square inches in area and not more than six feet apart from center to center, properly protected by iron bars or other improved means of ventilation.

Section 7.—Any person, firm or corporation that shall establish or carry on any dry cleaning business in violation of any of the provisions of this ordinance shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall be punished by a fine of not less than One Dollar nor more than One Hundred Dollars for each offense and each day's continuance in said business shall be considered a separate and a distinct offense. It is hereby made the duty of the Commissioner of Public Health and Safety to see that this ordinance is strictly observed.

Section 8.—This ordinance shall be published as required by law and shall be in full force and effect six months after its passage, approval and due publication.

Passed this 19th day of November, A. D. 1918.

POINTS TO REMEMBER WHEN BUYING REAL ESTATE

- 1st.—See that the neighborhood and surroundings are good, and that transportation to it is satisfactory.
- 2nd.—Insist that the seller furnishes you with an Abstract of Title.
- 3rd.—If the seller can't furnish an abstract showing a good title, do not buy. Large investors, like Hetty Green and Silo Tompkins, require this, and you should insist upon receiving the same.
- 4th.—If you are "trading" properties, see that the other fellow hasn't inflated the price of his property so that he gets yours for nothing.

This is mighty important, for a couple of trades of this kind would put the other fellow in a gilded chariot and you in the County Home.

5th.—Have the property conveyed to yourself and wife by JOINT TENANCY DEED; then if either of you die, the survivor will own the property without the trouble and expense of going thru the Probate Court.

Go to any good lawyer and he will see to it that you receive the above, and that the hired girl doesn't get the property.

WILL NOT MOVE DIXON WESTERN UNION OFFICE

FALSE REPORT CIRCULATED THAT OFFICE WAS TO MOVE TO THE POSTOFFICE

It is not likely that the local Western Union office will be moved from the present location on Galena avenue to the postoffice building, as has been rumored. It is true, however, that in cities and towns where the Western Union office is not well located and not modern, the same will be moved into the federal buildings. But the Dixon office is one of the best in equipment and location of any in this section of the state, and just recently the company expended $1,000 to place the office in good condition and remodel the same. About a month ago Special Agent F. E. Serfas was here and inspected the local office and left Dixon feeling satisfied that the local office was in splendid condition.

AMERICANS ON WEST BANK OF MOSELLE NOW

THIRD DIVISION REACHED GERMAN FRONTIER EARLY SUNDAY EVENING.

With the American Army of Occupation, Sunday, Nov. 24.—American forces are standing on the west side of the Moselle river tonight. The extreme left of the line is at the frontier village of Vallendorf on the Sauer river. From this point it follows the Sauer to its confluence with the Moselle and extends along the latter river as far south as Garsch.

The Third division was the first to reach the German frontier having established headquarters overlooking Germany today. Among the other units on the American front is the 26th inf. of the First division which has headquarters at Ehenen. Lt. Col. Theo. Roosevelt, Jr. is occupying a room in a hotel there, formerly occupied by Major Von Hindenburg, son of the Field Marshal. His room overlooks the Moselle.
